Co-Presidents’ Message

Welcome to this inaugural edition of the AATJ Newsletter! We are honored to serve as co-presidents of AATJ during this exciting time of transition. This new organization gives us the opportunity to work together as one field to support and expand Japanese language, linguistics, and literature instruction in the United States. In this newsletter, you will find news about familiar activities, such as the AAS Spring Conference and the Nengajo Contest results, as well as exciting new articles, such as level-specific “corners” highlighting ideas and materials for different areas, K-16.

We would like to take a moment to share our excitement about the many benefits that we now have as a K-16 organization. Like many other language organizations (AATSP, AATF, etc.), we now become a unified voice for advocacy, professional development opportunities, grant funding, and participation in national policy-making discussions. Our office operations are being streamlined with one website and one governing body. A new membership structure has the potential to generate new revenue for local affiliates and encourage more teachers to participate in your professional organizations. We can collaborate both horizontally and vertically with all of our colleagues in Japanese language, literature, and linguistics, on a range of projects, from sharing materials online at our new Facebook page to membership in AATJ Special Interest Groups. AATJ continues to offer members the Nengajo Contest, National Honor Society, and the National Japanese Exam Contest. In addition, we are thrilled to announce that both the Nengajo Contest and the National Honor Society will be open to both K-12 and university students. AATJ members are able to attend the ACTFL Conference at a discounted rate and can attend AATJ sessions at the Spring Conference with the Association of Asian Studies.

The new organization also gives us the opportunity to undertake projects to benefit the field on a larger scale. Faced with the constantly-changing global situation, Japanese language education in the United States is at the crossroads. This is a good time to reflect on the current status of our field and plan for its future. We are planning to publish a book to overview our profession. In April, our board members will gather to decide the direction of AATJ and plan our future activities in the areas of professional development, advocacy, member services, research, collaboration, community outreach, etc. We will keep you updated about our discussions and new plans through the newsletter and other communication channels.

We could not begin to work through this transition process without the guidance of Susan Schmidt, Executive Director, and Kathy Ajisaka, Executive Assistant, in our main office in Boulder. We are also thrilled to have an outstanding group of educators serving on this transition Board of Directors; please see their names below. We would like to send special congratulations to Motoko Tabuse for her election to the position of Vice President/Secretary. The entire Board has already been working diligently to ensure a smooth transition process.

We would also like to thank the officers of the Affiliates of NCJLT for their hard work on becoming “Official Affiliates” of this new organization. If you need any assistance with this process, please do not hesitate to contact us. We would also like to thank all of the previous members of ATJ and NCJLT for your energy and vision in supporting this new organization. If you have not yet joined online for this year, please do so at www.aatj.org to continue receiving member benefits.

We are confident that the new AATJ will fulfill your vision for a strong, connected, collaborative Japanese teachers’ organization. We look forward to working with all of you in the coming years. If you ever have any questions for us, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Introducing Officers and Directors of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese

2012 marks the launch of a new field-wide organization, the American Association of Teachers of Japanese (AATJ).

Thanks to two years of hard work by members of the ATJ Board, the NCJLT Board, and several teams of dedicated transition planners, we are off to a good start. Twelve state and regional organizations have become official affiliates of AATJ, and more than one thousand individuals and institutions have become members for 2012.

Governance Team

For 2012 and 2013, AATJ will be governed by a team of two Co-Presidents and two Vice-Presidents (a VP-Secretary and a VP-Treasurer). The duties of these officers (who will serve for the two transitional years) can be found in the AATJ Bylaws, which were approved by a vote of ATJ members last year (see http://www.aatj.org/2012reorganization/AATJBylaws.pdf).

The officers in turn appointed a team of directors for the various positions outlined in the Organization Chart that can be viewed online at http://www.aatj.org/2012reorganization/AATJOrgChart_rev.pdf. These individuals are all experienced former members of the NCJLT and ATJ Boards.

The editorial board of the journal Japanese Language and Literature will continue to serve in their positions.

Officers and Directors

The officers and directors who have agreed to serve the new organization for the initial two years are:
2012 AATJ Annual Spring Conference

The 2012 American Association of Teachers of Japanese (AATJ) Annual Spring Conference will take place on Thursday, March 15, in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Paper and panel presentations will take place at the Sheraton Centre Toronto Hotel [http://www.sheratontoronto.com] from 8:00 a.m. - 3:15 p.m.; a membership meeting, keynote speech, and reception will take place two blocks away, at the 89 Chestnut Conference Centre [http://www.89chestnut.com/catering/index.html], beginning at 6:30 p.m.

This conference, the first to be held under the auspices of the newly renamed AATJ, is the continuation of the ATJ Annual Conference; it will be held in conjunction with the 2012 Annual Meeting of the Association for Asian Studies (AAS) [http://www.asian-studies.org]. The AATJ Annual Spring Conference will feature more than 100 presentations on various aspects of Japanese language and literature, as well as a keynote speech by Dr. Jim Cummins, an internationally noted researcher on bilingualism at the University of Toronto’s Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE).

The conference program can be found in the center of this issue of the newsletter. It is also posted on the AATJ website in two versions – one containing just the schedule and the other containing abstracts for every presentation. Please download the program from http://www.aatj.org/conference/index.html.

Online registration for the conference will be open until March 1. Online registration fees are $40 for regular AATJ and AJLS members, $30 for student members, and $60 for non-members. After March 1, only on-site registration will be available, in Toronto, at the rate of $60 (cash or check only).

We strongly encourage everyone attending the AATJ Annual Spring Conference to also attend the Annual Meeting of the Association for Asian Studies [http://www.asian-studies.org/Conference/index.htm], which also takes place in Toronto, at the same venue, the Sheraton Centre Toronto Hotel, from March 15 - 18. This major conference features hundreds of presentations on Asian culture, history, politics, literature, and language -- including many on Japan -- as well as a huge Exhibit Hall where dozens of publishers show and sell their books on Asia. AATJ will have a booth in the Exhibit Hall; please visit us there, at Booth 425, from 10 - 6 on Friday, 10 - & on Saturday, and 9 - 12 on Sunday.

To reserve a room at the Sheraton Centre Toronto Hotel, at the special rate for the AAS Annual Meeting, please go to http://www.asian-studies.org/Conference/Hotel.htm.

Affiliate News

One of the purposes of the formation of the new organization American Association of Teachers of Japanese (AATJ) was to form a new type of synergy between the national Japanese language educators professional organization and the network of state and regional organizations that has been developed over the past years and decades.

As of press time, twelve state and regional organizations had applied to be official affiliates of AATJ. (Eleven of them were previously affiliated with NCJLT; one is a newly formed organization.)

They are listed on the AATJ website at http://www.aatj.org/affiliates/index.html, along with information on becoming an affiliate.

Forthcoming issues of the AATJ Newsletters will contain contributions from affiliates on their activities and information for their members.

Bridging Scholarship News

The Bridging Project for Study Abroad in Japan, a project of AATJ, administers the Bridging Scholarship program, which since 1999 has awarded more than 1,000 scholarships to undergraduate students studying abroad in Japan for a semester or an academic year. Funding for the scholarships comes from the US-Japan Bridging Foundation, based in Washington, DC, and the program administration is funded by a grant from the the Japan-US Friendship Commission, an independent agency of the US federal government.

Information on the Bridging Scholarship program is online at http://www.aatj.org/studyabroad/scholarships.html. Applications are now being accepted for Fall 2012 scholarships; the deadline for receipt of applications is April 6, 2012. At least 50 scholarships will be awarded to students who will study in Japan during the Fall 2012 semester or the 2011-2012 academic year.

Bridging Scholarships were recently awarded to the following 20 students for study in Japan during the Spring 2012 semester:

Sarah BITHER, Hamilton College (NY)/ Sophia University

Colt CHAFFIN, Wichita State University (KS)/ Kansai Gaidai

Caroline DAVIDSON, Tulane University (LA)/ Kansai Gaidai

Abbie DOLL, Bowling Green State University (OH)/ Nanzan

Hiroshi FUKADA, Purdue University (IN)/ Japan Center for Michigan Universities

Yuan HUANG, Temple University (PA)/ Temple University Japan Campus

Contributions to AATJ Endowment

AATJ has joined the ranks of other non-profit organizations in establishing an endowment fund. Contributions of any amount to this fund, which are tax-deductible, will help to ensure that the Association can continue to provide services to members in the future. Contributions have recently been made to the Endowment by Daniel Carolin, Rebecca Chau, and Yasuko Ito Watt. Please consider donating when you next renew your membership, or by mail at any time. For more information, contact the AATJ office.
Yo Azama Named 2012 National Language Teacher of the Year

Yoshiko Saito-Abbott, California State University Monterey Bay

Yo Azama, a Japanese teacher from Salinas, California, was named the 2012 National Language Teacher of the Year during the 2011 annual ACTFL (American Council on Teaching of Foreign Languages) convention held in Denver in November. This award is sponsored by ACTFL and publisher Holt McDougal, to recognize a foreign language teacher who exhibits excellence in language education. Yo is the first Japanese teacher to win this most prestigious annual award for foreign language teachers.

Yo was chosen as California’s 2011 Outstanding Teacher at the 2010 CLTA (California Language Teachers Association) Conference in San Diego. For his efforts he won a ticket to complete at the regional (Southwest) level. It was a rigorous process since candidates had to prepare a portfolio (which contained their teaching philosophy, a teaching video with a lesson plan, and students’ samples) followed by committee site interviews and a short speech / presentation on an issue of significance to the world language profession. Yo was named the 2011 Southwest Teacher of the Year at the SWCOLT regional conference in Forth Worth, and advanced to the National level.

Yo Azama graduated from California State University Monterey Bay with a single-subject credential and teaches at North Salinas High School in Salinas. I have been privileged to observe his professional growth as my colleague and co-presenter in numerous workshops and presentations at regional, state, and national conferences, where I have witnessed his commitment to the world language teaching profession. He is one of very few talented teachers who can truly demonstrate Standards-based instruction.

Yo Azama is not only an active presenter at professional organizations such as CLTA and ACTFL; his professionalism has also included informal tutorials at his school, organizing student trips to Japan, initiating district-level speech contests, participating in important school district committees, serving as an AP Japanese consultant for the College Board, and devoting many hours to help establish the AP Japanese course in his school district.

Yo joined MBFLP (the Monterey Bay Foreign Language Project), which provides professional development workshops for world language teachers in the site’s three county service area (Monterey, Santa Cruz, and San Benito counties), all the while teaching full-time in Salinas public schools. As one of MBFLP’s team leaders, he has shared his own growth and inspired teachers of all languages, always in creative ways and with his hallmark humor that dispels any anxiety while never forgetting the primary objective: to maximize students’ language proficiency. His workshops and presentations are always well received by participants since he models the best practices for target-language communication, uses research-based instructional strategies, and gives examples of students’ work.

Above all, Yo Azama is an outstanding teacher. Dedicated to teaching in the target language, his class is always a dynamic and engaging experience for students. Not only does he motivate his students; his teaching is a model for other teachers. In fact, his teaching has been showcased in a WGBH/Annenberg Foundation video that demonstrates best classroom practices. The video (available online at http://www.learner.org/libraries/tfl/japanese/azama/index.html) has been widely viewed and has inspired many teachers across the nation, and there is no doubt that he inspires his Japanese students, teachers of Japanese, and world language teachers and professionals. Yo is consistently generous with his time. That is why he seems to be universally admired by school administrators, fellow teachers, and students.

Yo will have a busy year ahead. As a spokesperson for language education over the coming year, he will deliver presentations at foreign language conferences, meet with policymakers, and appear at events to promote language education through ACTFL’s Discover Languages . . . Discover the World!® public awareness campaign.

On Stage: Dramatization in the Foreign Language Classroom

Using drama—what I will call any sort of role-playing, skit, play-acting, simulation, etc.—in our classrooms enhances interpersonal communication skills, personalizes and motivates students, and neatly fits with our goal of communicative competence. However, teachers are sometimes wary of adding drama to the curriculum, often because there seems to be no room for extra activities in an already-packed schedule. Also, drama represents a shift, from teacher-centered to learner-centered, that makes some teachers uncomfortable. Still, advantages to including some dramatic activities in your teaching are numerous: drama lets students practice real-life scenarios in a safe situation; dramatic techniques emphasize listening skills; and these activities can be used at any proficiency level. Here are a few suggestions to get you started. Start small, with guided activities that align with your language goals. Offer feedback. As your students get more comfortable, move into less structured activities. And enjoy!

Mime: Student 1 mimes taking an object out of a paper shopping bag. The class guesses what the object is, in the target language. The correct guesser is the next “mime.” Student 1 whispers the name of the next object to Student 2, who proceeds to “mime” removing that object from the bag. Continue playing.

10 Words: write ten common words or phrases on the board (for example, こんにちは、さようなら、ありがとう、これ、それ、一つ、二つ、どうぞ、はい、いいえ、ちがいます。). Students have ten minutes to create skits using ONLY these words. They may use each word as many times as they like. The class must guess where, who, and what is happening in each skit.

Create a Creature: in pairs, students use their bodies to create creatures according to your descriptions (for example, two heads, three arms, etc). This activity encourages physical movement, cooperation, and listening skills.

Improvise: assign a scenario. In small groups, students act out short skits, with or without preparation time. Possible scenarios include: “Lost in Tokyo;” “At the hospital;” “After an argument with your best friend;” ”Department Store Help Desk.” Characters can be teacher-assigned or student choice.

Dramatize: students write scripts that center around a self-selected haiku. By creating scenes that either precede the composition of the haiku or follow it, students can personalize well-known haiku and haiku poets and use critical thinking skills to make predictions.

Interview: Students stage “live” interviews with pop culture icons. Again, this can occur with or without preparation.

K-8 Corner

Welcome to the column designed especially for K-8 teachers of Japanese! I hope to use this column to share some of the ideas I’ve learned (from many of you) over the years and to spark discussion about methods and materials for K-8 programs. If you would like to contribute an activity, material, or advocacy idea to this column or have any questions, please write to me at jhaxhi@waterbury.k12.ct.us.

Singing the Praises of KARUTA カルタだいすき！！

In terms of Japanese teaching methods for ANY level, I cannot say enough about the game of KARUTA. It gets students out of their seats, moving, and learning together. I have used KARUTA with all levels from 1st grade to adult (in my methods classes!) and I’ve found few people who don’t enjoy it. I’m sure many of you are already using KARUTA in your classes as well.
PREPARATION

I like to use PowerPoint to make the flashcards. It makes it so easy! You can print as many sets of cards as you need. If you’d like to see an example, go to http://ctworldlanguagesk8.wikispaces.com/Top+Five and scroll down to Interpretive Communication. Click on the document called “Karuta Sports Demo.pptx.” I print the slides as “Handouts” with six per page and cut them up into sets for students. You can use a projector to show the slides in large view for vocabulary practice or to show the answers during the KARUTA game (just put blank slides in between each so that the screen is blank when you are yelling the next word). Older students can also make vocabulary flashcards themselves and then use them for KARUTA.

KARUTA can be used for the single word vocabulary practice or a complex interpretive listening activity. Here are some variations on the types of KARUTA you can make:

Play WORD KARUTA by making a separate card for each vocabulary word. For elementary, I often make picture cards, such as all different fruits. For older students, I put only the words written in hiragana/katakana/kanji for reading practice.

Play COUNTERS KARUTA by making cards with different amounts of items on them, like “four books” or “three bottles.” You can be complicated by only yelling the number, such as “yon-satsu” or “san-bon.”

Play SENTENCE KARUTA by making separate cards with pictures that represent a sentence, such as “The mother is making osechi.” For reading practice, you can make cards with only the sentence (no picture) in kana.

Play PARAGRAPH KARUTA by making cards with complicated pictures or artwork. Describe each picture until students slap it. For example, “There is a woman wearing a red kimono. Next to her, there is a cherry blossom tree, etc.”

Play TRADITIONAL KARUTA with a set of real cards from Japan!

PLAYING

Here are some “tips” I use as students play KARUTA.

Play in pairs or threes at the most. Pairs are really the best to maximize the amount of learning that each student can have during the game.

Explain the directions in Japanese. You can easily do this by modeling with two students playing in front of the class (or with fly-swatters on the board) first. I overact the directions while modeling: (a) they start each time with their hands behind their backs, (b) they keep one hand behind their back at all times, (c) if they both slap the card at the exact same time, they do “JAN, KEN, PON” to decide who gets it, and (d) if both students have their hands on the wrong cards when I show the answer, the first student to slap the correct card gets it (even though I have shown the answer).

Encourage them to stand when they play. I have them push in their chairs. Then, they can put the cards they win on their chairs.

During the game, I often have to remind students put both hands behind their backs before I yell the next word. This also helps to focus them if they are starting to get too wild.

Pace is very important in keeping students on task. Watch a few pairs and as soon as they are ready for the next card, call it. If you give them too much time between cards, they will get noisy.

When there are only two cards left to slap, call “time out.” Explain to students that you will now become “tricky.” You will say many different words. If they slap the cards for the wrong word, they are out. I try to say many words that sound like the cards they are listening for (example: if the card is “momo” I will say “moichido” or “monosashi” to confuse them.) This helps them to really focus on the final two words. I often have these words be the ones that are the most difficult for them. Also, it prevents them from hurting each other as they try for the last cards because they are hesitant to slap by mistake.

I hope this gives you some ideas to add to your “bag of tricks.”

2012 NCJLT “Year of the Dragon” Nengajo Contest Results

Thanks to everyone who participated in the 2012 Nengajo contest. 570 cards were submitted by 107 schools nationwide. There were so many great entries that it was very difficult to choose the winners.

Each of the winners received an award certificate and an Amazon gift card for their accomplishment. All the other participants received certificates of participation. Congratulations to all 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners! We would also like to congratulate all the teachers who participated in the contest. Your students’ cards clearly show your excellent work in the Japanese classroom!

Images of the cards will be displayed at the AATJ Exhibit booth during the ACTFL Annual Conference in Philadelphia from November 16 - 18. Items such as posters, cards, and stickers with images of the winning cards will also be available for purchase.

The 2012 contest was the last Nengajo Contest sponsored by NCJLT. The 2013 Nengajo Contest will be organized by AATJ.

We are thrilled to announce that next year’s Nengajo Contest will include a university level as well!

Thank you for your continued support of the Nengajo Contest. Please see the winning cards on the following pages. For larger images of the winning cards, please go to http://www.aatj.org/studentactivities/nengajocontest/index.html

With engaging manga-style content aligned with the Japanese AP exam, Tuttle’s Beginning Japanese and Intermediate Japanese set the new standard for middle- and high-school Japanese textbooks!

Beginning Japanese
Your Pathway to Dynamic Language Acquisition
by Michael L. Kluemper, Lisa Berkson, Nathan Patton and Nobuko Patton

The first book in this three-volume series that covers four years of instruction, Beginning Japanese begins the only textbook series that takes students from introductory Japanese through AP- and IB-level competency.

In Beginning Japanese, ten extensively field-tested lessons follow an engaging manga-style narrative about an exchange student to Tokyo named Kiara. With a friend’s time machine, Kiara and her friends make first-hand visits to various historical and famous events, places, and people in Japan. Through these visits, students not only learn hiragana, katakana, and 148 kanji, they acquire a rich knowledge of Japanese language and culture through dialogues, images, audio files.

Intermediate Japanese
Your Pathway to Dynamic Language Acquisition
by Michael L. Kluemper and Lisa Berkson

In the intermediate level of this acclaimed new series, students continue to study Japanese through an engaging storyline with an emphasis on real-life situations drawn from contemporary Japanese culture and authentic written, visual and oral materials embedded in the lessons. By the end of this book, learners will have mastered 149 additional kanji, for a cumulative total of 300 kanji.

Job Opening Announcements

University of British Columbia
The University of British Columbia is accepting applications for one or more renewable 12-month lecturer position(s) (1-year contract) in Japanese language, commencing September 1, 2012. Reappointment will be subject to performance. The successful applicant will teach 24 credits of Japanese Language courses, possibly from first to fourth-year, over the calendar year, as well as assist the Coordinator of the Japanese Language Program in program administration and development.

Applicants are required to have native or near-native fluency in Japanese and English, a Master's degree in Applied Linguistics, Japanese Linguistics, Language Education, or related fields and extensive teaching experience at the college/university level in North America. Strong interest in technology-based and/or content-based instruction and in curriculum development is a plus. Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Please send applications, including a letter of interest, Curriculum Vitae, names of three references, a videotape or a DVD of a class taught, as well as a lesson plan for the class taped, no later than March 1, 2012, to: Japanese 12-month Lecturer Search Committee, Department of Asian Studies, University of British Columbia, 1871 West Mall, Vancouver, BC Canada V6T-1Z2. This position is subject to final budgetary approval. UBC hires on the basis of merit and is committed to employment equity. We encourage all qualified persons to apply. However, Canadians and permanent residents of Canada will be given priority. Applicants in this group are encouraged to self-identify. For information about the Department, please visit http://www.asia.ubc.ca.

University of California San Diego
The Program in Japanese Studies (http://japan.ucsd.edu/) within the Department of History (http://history.ucsd.edu/) at the University of California, San Diego is committed to academic excellence and diversity within the faculty, staff, and student body and invites applications for a full-time lecturer position in Japanese language starting July 1, 2012. The initial appointment is one year with the possibility of renewal on a yearly basis based on performance and funding availability. Qualified candidates must have native or near-native proficiency in Japanese and English and have extensive experience in teaching all levels of Japanese language courses and in supervising and training teaching assistants.

The successful candidate is expected to work with existing faculty members to design and develop content-based courses, thematic-based courses and/or Japanese language for special purposes. Successful candidates will demonstrate strong or potential accomplishments in areas contributing to diversity, equity and inclusion, and a desire to play a leadership role in advancing UC San Diego’s commitment to achieving excellence and diversity.

The Program in Japanese Studies coordinates a variety of campus offerings related to the culture, history, political economy, and language of Japan and offers students the opportunity to major or minor in Japanese Studies. It offers six levels of Japanese language courses, including advanced Japanese and Written Japanese. A Ph.D. is desirable, but not required. Salary is commensurate with teaching experience and is based on University of California salary scales. Review of applications will begin on February 1, 2012, and continue until the position is filled.

Please send an application letter, curriculum vitae, three letters of recommendation, course evaluations and personal statement summarizing past or potential contributions to diversity (see http://facultyequity.ucsd.edu/Faculty-Applicant-C2D-Info.asp for further information) to: Y.-H. Tohsaku, Program in Japanese Studies, 0104 University of California San Diego, 9500 Gilman Drive, La Jolla, CA 92037-0104.

East Tennessee State University

Grinnell College
The Department of Chinese and Japanese (Japanese Language and Culture) at Grinnell College announces a one-year term position in Japanese Language and Culture, starting Fall 2012. Assistant Professor (Ph.D.) preferred; Instructor (ABD) possible. Grinnell College is a highly selective undergraduate liberal arts college. The College's curriculum is founded on a strong advising system and close student-faculty interaction, with few college-wide requirements beyond the completion of a major. The teaching schedule of five courses over two semesters will include at least three language courses.

In letters of application, candidates should discuss their interest in developing as a teacher and scholar in an undergraduate, liberal-arts college that emphasizes close student-faculty interaction. They also should discuss what they can contribute to efforts to cultivate a wide diversity of people and perspectives, a core value of Grinnell College. To be assured of full consideration, all application materials should be received by February 15, 2012.

Please submit applications online by visiting our application website at https://jobs.grinnell.edu. Candidates will need to upload a letter of application, curriculum vitae, transcripts (copies are acceptable), and provide email addresses for three references. Questions about this search should be directed to the search chair, Professor Mariko Schimmel, at [JapaneseSearch@grinnell.edu] or 641-269-3141.

Grinnell College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer committed to attracting and retaining highly qualified individuals who collectively reflect the diversity of the nation. No applicant shall be discriminated against on the basis of race, national or ethnic origin, age, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, marital status, religion, creed, disability or veteran status. For further information about Grinnell College, see our website at http://www.grinnell.edu.

Hamilton College: Language
The Japanese Program in the East Asian Languages and Literatures Department at Hamilton College invites applications for a full-time visiting position in Japanese Language, effective July 2012. The initial appointment is for one year with the possibility of renewal based on performance and funding availability. Responsibilities include teaching language courses at various levels. Applicants should: have either a Ph.D or an M.A in linguistics, pedagogy, foreign language education or relevant fields; be fluent in Japanese and English; and have training and experience in Japanese language teaching at the college level. Consideration of applications will begin in February and continue until the position is filled.

Please send letter of application, curriculum vitae, a brief statement of teaching philosophy, and sample of recent teaching evaluations to: Professor Kyoko Omori, Japanese Language Committee Chair, Hamilton College, 198 College Hill Road, Clinton, NY 13323 (or to ilang@hamilton.edu). Applicants should also have three letters of recommendation sent to Professor Omori. For full consideration, submit all materials by February 1, 2012.

Hamilton (www.hamilton.edu) is a residential liberal arts college located in upstate New York. Applicants with dual-career considerations can find other Hamilton and nearby academic job listings at www.upstatenyherc.org. Hamilton College is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer and is committed to diversity in all areas of the campus community. Hamilton provides domestic partner benefits. Candidates from underrepresented groups in higher education are especially encouraged to apply.

Hamilton College: Culture and Language
The Japanese Program in the East Asian Languages and Literatures Department at Hamilton College invites applications for a one-year visiting position in Japanese Culture/Language at the rank of Visiting Assistant Professor, effective July 2012. Responsibilities include teaching cultural aspects of Japan in the successful candidate’s specialization (e.g., literature, cinema/media), as well as language courses. We seek applicants with Ph.D. in hand or near completion, fluency or near fluency in Japanese and English, strong commitment to teaching undergraduates within an interdisciplinary context. Training and actual experience in Japanese language teaching at college level is strongly preferred. Consideration of applications will begin in February and continue until the position is filled.

Send letter of application, curriculum vitae, writing sample, and two sample syllabi in the applicant’s field to: Professor Kyoko Omori, Japanese Culture Search Committee Chair, Hamilton College, 198 College Hill Road, Clinton, NY 13323 (or to jculture@hamilton.edu). Applicants should also have transcripts and three letters of recommendation sent to the Committee Chair. For full consideration, submit all materials by February 1, 2012.

Harvard University
The Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations at Harvard University anticipates one or more openings for a full-time Drill Instructor/Teaching Assistant in Japanese beginning August 1, 2012 through July 31, 2013. Drill instructors assist course heads in Japanese language classes, assist in preparation of teaching materials, and teach individual drill sections. Candidates must have native or near-native fluency in all modalities of Japanese (reading, writing, listening, and speaking); a bachelor’s degree or higher; experience teaching Japanese, preferably at the college level to students whose native language is English; and computer literacy.

Candidates interested in applying for the position should submit (1) a letter of application, (2) a curriculum vitae, and (3) the names and email contact information of three references to http://academicpositions.harvard.edu/postings/3877. The references will be contacted separately and invited to upload letters of recommendation. In addition, (4) a 20-minute DVD of the applicant teaching should be submitted by surface mail to the following address:

Chair, Drill Instructor Search
Japanese Language Program
Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations
Harvard University
5 Bryant Street
Cambridge, MA 02138

All the above should be submitted by February 27, 2012.

It is anticipated that interviews for this position will be conducted at the Annual Meeting of the Association for Asian Studies, March 15-17, 2012, in Toronto, Ontario. Selected candidates will be contacted directly in early March regarding their availability for an interview at AAS.

Harvard University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Applications from women and minorities are strongly encouraged.

Indiana University of Pennsylvania

Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP) invites applications for a full-time tenure-track position in Japanese at the Assistant Professor level for fall 2012. Appointee will primarily teach elementary, intermediate, and advanced Japanese language classes. As time allows, the person will also teach such courses as “Introduction to Asian Studies” and “Japanese Literature in Translation” as part of the Asian Studies major.

Qualifications: Successful candidates will possess native or near-native proficiency in both Japanese and English; hold a Ph.D. degree in Japanese literature, Japanese Foreign Language (JFL) pedagogy, or a related field; and have experience teaching Japanese at the college level. Preference will be given to candidates who demonstrate familiarity with theories in second language acquisition and current practices in JFL pedagogy in North American higher education settings. Candidates must communicate effectively and perform well during the interview(s) which may include a teaching demonstration. Applicants must be work eligible.

How to apply: Send letter of application, current curriculum vitae, transcripts (official versions required for interview), three letters of reference, a one-page teaching philosophy statement, and examples of teaching effectiveness to: Dr. Marjorie Zambrano-Paff, Search Chair, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, 481 Sutton Hall, 1011 South Drive, Indiana, PA 15705-1087. Review of applications will begin February 1, 2012 and will continue until the position is filled.

Women and minority candidates are strongly encouraged to apply. IUP is an equal opportunity employer M/F/H/V. Indiana University of Pennsylvania is a member of the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education.

Oberlin College
The East Asian Studies Program at Oberlin College invites applications for a one-year, non-continuing faculty position as Visiting Assistant Professor of Japanese Language and Literature/Cinema/Linguistics in the College of Arts and Sciences during the academic year 2012-13.

Research and teaching expertise in the areas of Japanese literature, film, or linguistics is essential, and teaching experience in Japanese language is highly desirable. The incumbent will teach an introductory course or seminar in literature, popular culture, cinema, or linguistics, and Japanese language courses as required. Total course load is five courses per academic year.

While the preferred candidate will have a Ph.D. degree in-hand or expected by first semester of academic year 2012-2013, ABD candidates are also encouraged to apply. Candidates must demonstrate interest and potential excellence in undergraduate teaching. Successful teaching experience at the college level is highly desirable.

Native or near-native proficiency in Japanese and in English is also required. Oberlin’s Japanese language and literature/cinema curriculum is lodged within the East Asian Studies Program, which also covers Chinese language and literature, Korean Studies, and extends into the disciplines of Anthropology, Politics, History, Religion, and Art History. Related courses in Ethnomusicology are also offered. Further information is available at: http://www.oberlin.edu/eastasianstudies.

To be assured of consideration, a letter of application, including a curriculum vitae, graduate academic transcripts, and at least three letters of reference should be sent to: Professor Sheila Miyoshi Jager, Director, East Asian Studies Program, Oberlin College, 50 North Professor Street, 316 Peters Hall, Oberlin, OH 44074 by January 23, 2012. Application materials received after that date may be considered until the position is filled. Salary will depend on qualifications and experience.

Oberlin College is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer committed to creating an institutional environment free from discrimination and harassment based on race, color, sex, marital status, religion, creed, national origin, disability, age, military or veteran status, sexual orientation, family relationship to an employee of Oberlin College, and gender identity and expression. Oberlin was the first coeducational institution to grant bachelor’s degrees to women and historically has been a leader in the education of African-Americans; the college was also among the first to prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation. In that spirit, we are particularly interested in receiving applications from individuals who would contribute to the diversity of our faculty in all respects.

Princeton University
The Department of East Asian Studies at Princeton University invites applications for a possible full-time position as lecturer in Japanese, which may become available beginning September 1, 2012. Essential qualifications include: a M.A. in Linguistics, Japanese pedagogy, TESOL or equivalent; native or near-native fluency in Japanese; experience teaching at the college level teaching Japanese to English-speaking students; and excellent command of English. Salary is competitive. Princeton University is an equal opportunity employer and complies with applicable EEO and affirmative action regulations.

To apply online, please visit https://jobs.princeton.edu, providing a letter of application and curriculum vitae, by March 10, 2012. Letters of recommendation will be requested at a later date; please do not submit them with your application.

Online Course: Basic Concepts of Japanese Language Teaching

The JOINT online professional development program of the American Association of Teachers of Japanese (AATJ) will offer Basic Concepts of Japanese Language Teaching in Spring 2012.

This 6-week online course provides new and/or prospective Japanese language teachers with training and resources to gain basic knowledge about foreign language teaching in the U.S. This course is designed primarily for prospective or new teachers with up to three years of teaching experience, but it may also be beneficial for teachers who have more than three years of experience but have not received much professional development in foreign language teaching.

The course aims to help participants understand the basic principles of Japanese language teaching, and to seek out their ideal “kyoshizo” (image of what sort of Japanese language teacher they want to be). The course, which features the use of interactive technologies and collaborative work by participants, will be conducted between March 12 and April 29, 2012 (six weeks of class and one week of orientation and technology familiarization).

Description: The course introduces important aspects of Japanese language teaching, including (1) issues in Japanese language education in the U.S., (2) the ACTFL proficiency guidelines, and (3) Standards for Japanese Language Learning. The course utilizes background readings and some existing materials as examples, but hands-on experience is emphasized, and course participants will develop their own teaching philosophy and learning scenarios. Participants will work on assigned readings and lectures independently, hold online video conference discussions in small groups, keep a reflection journal, and work on projects individually and collaboratively in pairs. Assignments and evaluations are designed to accommodate the differing needs of those who are enrolled in the course. Teachers at both the K-12 and post-secondary levels, as well as both native and non-native speakers of Japanese, are invited to enroll.

Faculty: Kazue Masuyama (California State University, Sacramento); Eiko Ushida (University of California, San Diego).

Schedule: This course will be delivered entirely online. Participants will be expected to spend about five hours a week on average on coursework: for reading, one hour listening to an online lecture, one hour in real-time group discussion, and two hours working on assignments and projects.

Materials: Selected reading materials will be made available online.

Credit and Grading: Graduate credit (2 units from the University of Colorado) is made available for those who wish it, at a reasonable cost (usually $60 per credit). Participants who elect to receive credit will receive grades for the course; grades will be based on participation, materials development projects, completion of assigned readings, and self/peer evaluation. All participants who complete the course will receive certificates of completion from AATJ/JOINT.

Fees: The fee for the course is $95, payable after enrollment is confirmed. (This fee is separate from the cost of registering to earn credit, which is optional.) There is a limit on the number of participants who can be accommodated, and you will be notified after sending your enrollment request.

Required Technical Background for Participants: Participants should be familiar with basic Internet features such as looking for information, reading online materials, downloading materials, sending and receiving emails, and online chatting. Experience with using Skype (voice and/or webcam) and a collaborative writing tool such as Google Docs or wiki would be a plus. A fast Internet connection (Ethernet or wireless) will be needed to work on various online activities; dial-up modem connection is not recommended. Participants who do not have a webcam and microphone built into their computers will need to purchase one for course participation (the cost for this equipment is usually about $25).

How to Enroll: To enroll in this course, please complete the online application form available at http://www.aatj.org/joint/BasicCourse.html and email it as directed.

Program Announcements: Washington University in St. Louis

Mellon Fellowship in Japanese Literature

Students entering the Ph.D. program in Japanese Literature or the Joint Program in Japanese and Comparative Literature in Fall 2012 or Fall 2013 will be considered for a Mellon Fellowship. This fellowship, offered by the Andrew Mellon Foundation, in conjunction with the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Washington University, will provide exceptional students an additional stipend of $25,000 distributed over a five-year period. This stipend will be awarded in addition to the standard financial aid package awarded to all admitted Ph.D. students. For more information on this financial aid package, please see below.

Ph.D. Programs in Japanese Literature

The Japanese Program at Washington University in St. Louis inaugurated a new Ph.D. program in Japanese literature, commencing Fall 2011. This program provides a solid foundation in Japanese literature together with the requisite expertise in a research concentration, producing scholars who are well versed in Japanese literary and cultural traditions, prepared to enter the academic arena as researchers and teachers. Doctoral students will select a complementary minor field in a second East-Asian literary tradition or another area of Japanese Studies, as appropriate. This Ph.D. program is offered in addition to our program in Japanese and Comparative Literature—a combined program that offers a geographically and chronologically broader perspective on literary and cultural achievements and includes careful grounding in theoretical discourse. Ph.D. students may also select from among several certificate options, including Translation Studies, Film and Media Studies, and Women, Gender, and Sexualities Studies.

Japanese section faculty possesses wide-ranging expertise in literature and its various historical, social, and cultural contexts. Research strengths encompass poetry and poetics, the history of reading, literary modernization, personal narrative, literary journalism, women’s writing, gender issues, and the theory and practice of translation.

Our Financial Commitment: All students admitted to the Ph.D. program can expect five years of financial aid, provided they maintain a successful coursework record. Entering students typically receive a University fellowship, which carries full tuition remission and a competitive level of financial aid. Doctoral candidates in their final year of dissertation writing...
(usually the fifth or sixth year of doctoral study) will be eligible for a Graduate School Dissertation Fellowship. In the intervening years, qualified graduate students will be eligible for a combination of Teaching and Research Assistantships and University fellowships, all of which carry full tuition remission. Doctoral students can also apply for additional summer support for research and examination preparation.

For more information about the Ph.D. programs, please consult the webpage: http://japanese.artsci.wustl.edu/graduate or contact Rebecca Copeland, copeland@wustl.edu.

Mellon-Sawyer Seminar

Funding for the Mellon Scholarship has been made possible through the language and culture education for over 50 years and offers 1, 2, and 4-week residential immersion summer camps in Japanese and 14 other languages. ASSESSMENTS FOR JAPANESE LANGUAGE INSTRUCTION

July 10-13, 2012  University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu, Hawaii
Website: http://nflrc.hawaii.edu/prodev/si12j/

This four-day summer institute (July 10-13, 2012), sponsored by the National Foreign Language Resource Center (NFLRC) at the University of Hawaii is intended for faculty members and Ph.D. students who are engaged in Japanese language education at postsecondary institutions, especially those who feel they have had limited training and experience in assessment (including testing), but want to improve Japanese language assessment practices in their home institutions.

To help defray travel expenses to attend the summer institute, partial financial support will be offered to successful applicants as funding permits: Up to $1,000 per faculty participant affiliated with a U.S. mainland institution. Faculty members in foreign countries are ineligible for this funding. Students are also ineligible, unless they are instructional employees of their institution (e.g., teaching assistants, lecturers, etc.). About 20 participants will be accepted for this workshop.

Selected classroom assessment modules developed by participants as part of the workshop will be published by the NFLRC as a Network (available online for teachers of Japanese around the world).

For more information, please visit the summer institute website. If you have additional questions, please email: nflrc@hawaii.edu <nflrc@hawaii.edu>

New Online Methods Course Announced

Iowa State University will offer “Methods in Elementary School World Language Instruction” as an online course in Fall 2012 and Spring 2013. This course is designed for practicing teachers and pre-service teachers who have studied a world language extensively. Marcia H. Rosenbusch, Ph.D., who is the Iowa State University instructor for the course, has invited a team of 14 leading national experts in elementary school world language education to teach course components in their areas of expertise. The collaborators, including practicing teachers and teacher trainers, represent both the commonly and the less commonly taught languages. The course is available for three credits of undergraduate or graduate credit. The course also meets partial requirements for the Iowa Endorsement in K-8 World Language Education. Please check with your State Department of Education to see if this course meets requirements for endorsement or certification in your state. For more information contact Marcia H. Rosenbusch: Email: mrosenbu@iastate.edu; Office: 515-294-6454.
Calls for Papers

Call for Papers: The Annual Conference of the Association for Japanese Literary Studies

The 2012 conference of the Association for Japanese Literary Studies (AJLS) will be held at Ohio State University October 12-14, 2012.

The theme of the 2012 AJLS Conference is “Rhetoric and Region: The Local Determinants of Literary Expression.” The theme of the conference will also be inclusive of a broad spectrum of papers and panels. It will provide a forum for those with an interest in individual writers and will also be inclusive of papers on a broad spectrum of genres—travel writing, poetry, diaries, memoirs, essays. In terms of the relation between linguistics, literature, and place, we anticipate panels both in classical and modern Japanese literature that concern non-standard usage, the representation of dialects, and such theoretical issues as the unique nature of the utterance in time and space, or the idea of chronotopes in relation to Japanese literature. Film, too, is a fruitful subject for exploration at this conference.

We encourage papers from those in a variety of disciplines and hope that the conference will be as inclusive as possible. Proposals may come either from individuals or from panels. Graduate students are especially welcome. Presentations may be delivered in either English or Japanese.

The deadline for panel, roundtable, and individual paper proposals is June 1, 2012.

Please address your proposal (including an abstract of 250 words) or queries to the program committee in care of stucky.7@osu.edu. A link to the conference website is found at http://japan.osu.edu.
